Excerpt from History of the Forty-Second Indiana Volunteer Infantry

One has said: "It is a sordid thing to write for money, a selfish thing to write for fame, but it is a sweet and glorious thing to write for the approval of those we most intensely love."

While I pen these lines, one sits near by who, in the dark days of '61, when I "went away to the wars," leaving not a dollar for her to care for my children with, in a spirit of enthusiastic patriotism she said: "Go, God bless you, and protect you!" And I now call to mind the hundreds on hundreds of patriotic women of our land who made such sacrifices, and then, comrades, in the light of their hardships, and trials, to me it seems as if our endurances and privations were insignificant indeed.

How much the Nation owes the self-sacrificing women of our land, none can ever compute. For the one by my side to-night, and for the thousands of others enduring in those dark days like she did, I write, and to her, and to them, dedicate this little volume in part,

But not to them alone, but to former comrades in arms, of whose heroism I write, that their deeds of renown and of high emprise may stand in enduring types; supported by history, that their children, and children's children may read; - this book is also dedicated.

Let me paraphrase, my comrades, and say to you as you read these pages:

"Backward, turn backward, memory in flight,
Make us soldiers again, if but for to-night."
