Chanel has always maintained an impeccable work ethic. Whenever she was assigned a mark, she executed without question. She, along with her twin sister were known to be the women to see if you wanted a man killed. Years of living from city to city and trying to remain under the radar had finally taken its toll. At the age of twenty-eight, she starts to feel like her life is missing something— bored with the same routine Chanel starts to entertain the thought of leaving the game. While in Atlanta, Georgia on her final mission, Chanel does something that she has never done before; got close to a mark Cash is well on his way to King Pin status. Hustling major shipments of someone else's product over the years has him finally ready to become his own boss. He gathered a group of his most loyal friends, and formed his own organization; The Billionaire Boys Club. A new Colombian connect paired with the longest quality cocaine drought to ever hit Atlanta is the recipe for success... and hate! Even though the beautiful assassin is hired to take Cash out, due to the connection that they share and the way she vibes with him, she just can't seem to follow through with it. Business is always personal when matters of the heart get involved. Sacrifices are made, drama is imminent, lives are lost, and interests are definitely conflicted in this thrilling Atlanta hood affair. Will Chanel find love with the man whose life she spared or did she make a mistake by not killing him?
